OBJECTIVE OF THE SEMINAR:

The seminar was aimed to discuss about the vanishing folk tales of Bengal in this era of globalization and boom in social media providing easy access to addictive audio-visual entertainment. It was meant to make the students aware about the rich culture and heritage of Bengal which has a prominent place in the 'Indian Knowledge System'.

SPEAKER:

Mr. Debasish Biswas, Assistant Professor, Department of Bengali, GGDC, Mangalkote

PROCEEDINGS OF THE SEMINAR:

The speaker began his lecture by describing the meaning of folk tales, the essence they carry and how they have been transmitted down the generation mostly through word-of-mouth. He then stressed on the issues of rapidly vanishing interest in folk tales and the need for their preservation. He then gave some names of researchers in this field who have been working continuously towards collection, documentation and preservation of folk tales from different corners of Bengal. Speaking of their importance, he highlighted how folk tales speak of the cultural beliefs, the socio-political conditions and the economic strata in the society in the pre-historic times and their evolutionary trajectories as science and civilization took control of humankind. He also highlighted how folk tales have contributed to the enrichment of Bengali literature and how they talk of pre-historic times. At times, folktales also talk about certain rituals which can no longer be observed today. In a subtle manner, they also talk about social, gender and environmental issues. These were elaborated by the speaker.

ABOUT THE PROGRAMME:

India is a treasure trove of culture, heritage and literature. The interesting fact about this country is its diversity and the local beliefs associated in various parts of the country that has given rise to various tales, often referred to as folk tales. These tell tales of ancient history of a region, superstitions and religious beliefs that shaped a particular part of India. Most of these are either passed down through generations orally as songs or stories or are depicted in paintings, handlooms or other works of art. Though civilization brought to mankind the boons of science and technology these little pieces of art are being eroded with time. The programme aims to enlighten the students about the folk tales of Bengal which will help them appreciate the Indian culture, heritage and literature.
